

PFW Police Officer's Past Inspires Servant-First Approach

Partly why he loves America so much, Htoo Doh says, is because he was always looked upon as "less than" before arriving here. Less than the majority in his native Burma, now often called Myanmar, enduring religious persecution, and then less than living alone in a Thailand refugee camp.

It's why he chose to live where we often take our freedoms for granted.

"This was the first country that ever recognized me as a human being, as a person," Doh said. "I feel like this is my country, and I want to give back to my community."

That is also why Doh never gave up on his dream of becoming a police officer despite getting turned down five times. He joined the police department at Purdue University Fort Wayne last fall and recently returned from four months of academy training, which though intense, was not nearly as challenging as his early life.
