Continuing Our Spring Forward

Hi, friends,

So glad we got to see the sun and some warmer temperatures earlier this week. It's a sure sign that spring is coming—like 11:06 Tuesday night. And we have some amazing things in store for you the remainder of the semester.

Are you a March Madness fan like me? Today is “Selection Sunday” and the brackets will be announced at 6 p.m. on CBS. While PFW won't be dancing this year, it won't be too long until our own Mastodon men's and women's teams get their names called! Until then, let's enjoy the craziness of Division 1 postseason basketball. There are two watch parties scheduled this month.

Are petting mini-horses and therapy dogs, planting succulents, and laughing hysterically at a nationally known comedian more your vibe? Save March 28 for the Well-being Summit.

Want to learn which fork to use at a formal meal? Join a free, three-course dining etiquette meal April 4. Love live music? Come to the first Don's Got Music competition April 15. Ready to blow off some steam as the semester comes to an end? The Mastodon Challenge on April 17 is for you! And, trust me, you absolutely want to save the date for a HUGE surprise April 26—keep an eye out for hints around campus.

This is just a small sampling of spring programs and events. See more and get specific information at pfw.edu/events and refer to your Spring Programming Guide.

By the way, don't forget to check out Wednesday's Don Life in your inbox or access this archived edition to learn how your feedback on student housing can earn you big prizes.

Whatever your vibe, get out to enjoy the sun and warmer temps, paddle a kayak on the river, and experience something new!

See you out there,

Dr. Krissy Surface
