Prepping for Midterms

Hey everyone,

Believe it or not, midterms are right around the corner. We want to ensure you are as prepared as possible for exams, projects, papers, and anything else.

Logically, the first step is checking your syllabus for each course to know when exams are scheduled and when assignments are due.

Once you know what is expected of you in each course, we have many academic resources that you can take advantage of. Below are two of several to check out.

The Writing Center is here to help you write your next paper or prepare for your next presentation. Located on the first floor of the library, it has various resources to get assist you. Also listed on the website are different ways that you can connect with a consultant.

The Tutoring Center offers free services to support your work in many different programs of study. It is located in Kettler Hall, Room G20A. Appointments can be made via TutorTrac and are available remotely and in-person. And it doesn't stop there, there are other tutoring options as well. Learn more here!

Something to note, midterms and finals are typically a busy time for the centers; be sure to plan ahead and schedule appointments in advance.

Best of luck as you continue with the spring semester.

You got this!

All my best,
