

New Alumna Followed Faith-Filled Journey to PFW and Beyond

While walking her incredible journey from Boise, Idaho, to an Exemplar designation at Purdue University Fort Wayne, recent graduate Katherine Marx made it look like she was confidently following an original plan.

But she truly wasn't; Marx had to release control and rely upon her faith for guidance, rarely knowing what to do next, but always praying for discernment. And she always found an answer. The path forward repeatedly presented itself, even the one she'll follow next to one of the world's most prestigious musical institutions.

A double major in flute and vocal performance, Marx fell in love with music and picked the flute at age 10, joining the school band. Music became her passion in high school.

Free Public Screening of New Documentary Offered On Campus Monday

There was a time when Fort Wayne was known as the “Heavy Duty Truck Capital of the World.” Thousands of hardworking and talented employees of International Harvester helped the city and IH earn that reputation. Now those stories will be told by PBS Fort Wayne in a documentary premiering at Purdue University Fort Wayne on Monday.

The free screening of “Truck Town—The History of International Harvester in Fort Wayne” will start at 6:30 p.m. in Auer Performance Hall. Several IH trucks and the legendary Scout will also be parked outside of the Purdue Fort Wayne Music Center beginning at 5:30 for patrons to get an up-close look.

Tickets are free and available on a first-come, first-served basis through PFW's online ticketing platform or the Schatzlein Box Office.

Combining archival material with over 30 interviews, this two-hour documentary spans from the 1800s to the present day. Click here to learn more and watch a short preview.
