

Question Time

Could the administration please explain why certain faculty members across campus are being targeted for early retirement? How many faculty are on this list and what does the administration hope to accomplish? To what extent did the administration think about the impact of suggesting early retirement to faculty who are still happily engaged in their teaching, research, and service? Moreover, is it not the case that departments, and not the administration, should determine what kinds of faculty lines are needed?

C. Erickson